Why to buy this Boat & Reviews

The name Bonny Read is a nod to the Caribbean's two most notorious female pirates, Anne Bonny and Mary Read, who were convicted of piracy and sentenced to hang by a British Admiralty court in Jamaica in 1721. Be that as it may, their namesake is a far cry from a crusty old man-o-war. She is the largest of the Performance Sport Yacht line available from Palmetto, Florida, custom builder Sea Force IX, and she is as pretty a lady as you'll feast your eyes upon. Her long sloping sheer extends almost to the cockpit where it drops low for maximum fishing advantage. The dark blue hull is set off by a teak toe rail and bright white house, enclosed bridge and skybridge. The hardtop bristles with antennas, masts, satellite communication and television domes, twin radar arrays and everything else a sport-fishing yacht built to travel the world's oceans could possibly need. This is a boat sure to be the center of attention in whatever port it enters.
